BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

James M. Barney (1874-1965), a native of Arizona, was born in Yuma and educated at Stanford University. A member of Stanford's first graduating class; Barney became a surveyor, and worked for the U.S. Government as an engineer and topographical draftsman for over 30 years. However, Barney is best remembered for his second career, as a writer on the history of Arizona. After retiring from government service in 1944, Barney began writing full time. Known as the "unofficial historian for Arizona," Barney was a regular contributor to Sheriff Magazine, and wrote a weekly column in the Phoenix Gazette entitled "Historical Highlights."

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The James M. Barney Collection consists of four series: 1) Published Articles, written by Barney for publication in the Phoenix Gazette and various magazines; 2) Manuscripts on Arizona topics; 3) Photographs; and 4) Miscellaneous items. Barney's manuscripts include a number of "picture essays," which are collections of captioned photos on various Arizona topics. Series three, Photographs, consists of images originally used as illustrations in several of Barney's manuscripts. They have been removed and grouped together as a series, and replaced by photocopies in the manuscripts. In this series, photo numbering reflects a previous organizational scheme. Any unassigned numbers once belonged to manuscript items, which are housed in the manuscript series. Date of capture is unknown for all photos unless otherwise specified in the item description. The fourth series, Miscellaneous, includes Arizona political campaign memorabilia, two journals from the 1910 Arizona Constitutional Convention which contain the propositions discussed and voted on by the convention, as well as miscellaneous newsclippings and correspondence. The James M. Barney Collection was acquired by AHF in 1969.
