BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE:

Grace Marion Sparkes was born 1893 in the Black Hills country of South Dakota. She was the daughter of Thomas J. Sparkes and Mary Ann Martin. Grace had two older brothers, Thomas and John and a sister, Charity. Thomas Sparkes was a mining engineer who made a fortune in Alaska during the Klondike gold rush. He was a man of many accomplishments - an interpreter for the Sioux Indians, publisher of the first newspaper in Dawson, financial donor for the first hospital in Nome, and representative of the Yukon miners to the Canadian government concerning protection of their rights. Grace, nicknamed Babe, was very close with her father whom she assisted in many endeavors.

In 1906, the Sparkes Family moved to Prescott, Arizona. At age 17, Grace graduated from St. Joseph's Academy in Prescott, a Catholic girls' school. She remained a lifelong Catholic and member of Prescott's Sacred Heart Parrish. Grace went on to Lamson Business College in Phoenix and returned to Prescott to begin a 34-year career as secretary of the Yavapai County Chamber of Commerce. Concurrently, she also served as Immigration Commissioner of Yavapai County from 1913-1938.

Grace Sparkes worked on numerous projects and civic activities. From 1925-1930 she publicized the Sunkist Trail and lobbied for the construction of the Blythe-Ehrenberg bridge which provided a short cut from Los Angeles to Phoenix. She was a founding member of the Smoki Dancers, 1922. Santa Barbara printer Jack McDonald proposed marriage in 1925 but Grace Sparkes declined. When asked later why she had never married, Grace said "that would mean just another job."

In 1926, Sharlot Hall hired Sparkes to help with business affairs and acted as her press agent until Hall's death in 1943. Sparks raised funds for building the Hassaymapa Hotel in 1927 through the Hotel Committee. She also was secretary of the annual Frontier Days

Rodeo, and in 1933 persuaded Will Rogers to make an appearance at the rodeo. Sparkes worked to secure the Post Office building in Prescott, was instrumental in having Tuzigoot Ruins in Verde Valley declared a national monument, and was one of the first women invited to join the Aeronautic Association.

Grace Sparkes also served as volunteer secretary of the Arizona Small Mine Operators Association. She subsequently became involved in mining, owning shares in small mines, writing mining articles, and lobbying for mining legislation. Eventually Sparkes left Prescott and moved to Bisbee. In 1946, she set up the "Montezuma Canyon Mineral Village" shop to sell rocks and minerals from her mining claims. During the 1950s Sparkes was a volunteer head of the Coronado International Monument Committee of Arizona and chairman of the Bisbee Chamber of Commerce Committee on National Parks and Monuments.

Grace Sparkes died following surgery at the Copper Queen Hospital in Bisbee, on October 23, 1963. She is buried in the family plot at Mountain View Cemetery in Prescott, Arizona.

She was an outstanding booster for tourism in Arizona and the Southwest, a writer, explorer, radio commentator, horseback rider, musician, crusader for the improvement of Arizona's road systems, and involved in just about every civic activity in Prescott. Grace Sparkes was inducted into the Arizona Women's Hall of Fame in 1985.
